DEDICATION

This book is dedicated to the duo of my dear old-woman, Yetunde with whom strain I have sit back to bring forth this book and for whose love I have produced most of my love poems and, to my mother and father, being my only most glaring traceable true source on earth.

Our Love Journey

From the East,
Where the sun rises;
We set.
To the stream,
Where sorrow and joy settle;
Our journey began.
Far to the waterfall,
Where pleasure and displeasure rush;
We drank.
And, to the wings of Angels,
Where everlasting happiness rest;
We ride.
And, till we'll reach the West,
Where our sun shall rest forever;
I shall always love you.

Oh Love! So Are You?

An ever flowing spring,
The source of which is unknown,
The length of which is undeterminable,
The width of which beyond the sight,
Such an ever flowing spring yet so tiny;
Perhaps, since the beginning of time,
It exists.
Though invisible; its uniting power so baffling,
It cut across the Atlantic and the Pacific,
Its presence for which the world is not without;
Its binding power so intriguing.
Residing a fragile residence as home,
Yet; outlives all the livings on earth.
For generations yet unborn; it'll live.
Oh love! So are you?
Oh thou! Seek love however far or near,
For it's beautiful however ugly it becomes.
For whoever finds love finds life,
However short he lives, methink.

In My Heart I Hold You

I may have travelled wide and far though,
Shuttling from city to city day in, day out,
Still; in my heart I hold you all day long.

As in your lush face I see joy mirrored,
Your tender caring touch I feel as I roam,
Augmenting my love deeper than the deepest sea,
Igniting my passion for you like the sparkling thunder;
As if we are together traveling around the world.

Though we are further apart like the west and the east,
And seemed like we would never meet again;
But, no matter how far or wide I roam,
To you I must return for to you I belong.

Without You In My Heart

Without you residing in my heart every seconds;
The rainbow will loose all its colours,
Neither pink, nor yellow or blue will be there;
A desert with no sand my heart would be.

Without you residing in my heart every minute;
The sun will loose its glow in minute,
Not even a ray of light will be seen.

Without you residing in my heart every hour;
A mirage of hopes my dreams will remain,
Dreams we have together made would be gone;
For they cannot survive without you, my love.

Without you residing in my heart every day;
Awaken passions and desires will be still,
For they cannot progress without you, my love.

My Love You'll Remain

Even though love bids me goodbye yearning to leave,
Even though goodbye swears with me to follow,
Even if memory pleads your place to replace,
Still, oh love! My love you'll remain.

Though it hurts watching you as you sway away,
And every thought of the moment produces a sore;
One that succeeds the parting of the hearts began to grow,
However tall or wide or broad the sore becomes;
Still, oh love! My love you'll remain.

Even as wrinkles of puzzles began to form as you leave,
And with bewilderment of parting my face is engraved;
A reason to live gives the torment of being without you,
Even as I weep and cry and sob in pains for parting,
Still, oh love! My love you'll remain.

I Swear I Love You

I swear I love you; not for your beauty,
Even as your beauty compares none,
I swear I love you; not for your wealth,
Even though you are naturally endowed.
I swear I love you; not for you are precious;
Even though you are gold,
I swear I love you; not for any visible thing,
Even though you are glaringly visible,
But, I swear I love you for whom you are.
I swear I love you for I choose to love you.
I swear I love you for I believed in you,
I swear I love you for the heart I feel.
And, I swear I love you for we're meant to be!

All Time to Come

Though a vision of what life was to be you gave,
To me, you showed the world I was to see;
A world filled with passion and love you created.
Solemnly, you promised an eternal love;
A promise so promising you made,
And a love so divine of all love ever made.
Always be there while lending a hand you said,
And none but all you made come to pass.
Indeed! You showed me that you care.
And now that you are nowhere found around,
How else may I appreciate all you have done?
Than to remember you for all time to come,
To love you for the rest of my life, I promise.

Trace of Loneliness

Your love is the sparkle of light that ignited my soul,
Without which my heart would never glow in whole;
It touches my heart and makes me a whole alone,
The holiness I'd attained not without your soul.
Though we seemed tore in pieces while far apart,
But the peace in our relationship remains a thread;
One that binds us however far apart we are.
Though you're there and I'm here living distances within,
And the distresses of loneliness hunt our minds;
While memories of togetherness remain a clue to the past,
We yearn to see in peace and cheer in whole again.
